

Developers are producing thousands of apartments yearly through residential conversions

U.S. cities are converting outdated hotels, office buildings, warehouses, factories and other structures into apartments. Among office buildings, older Class B and C structures are often the best suited for residential conversion.

